Principal's Message

Empathy and empowering

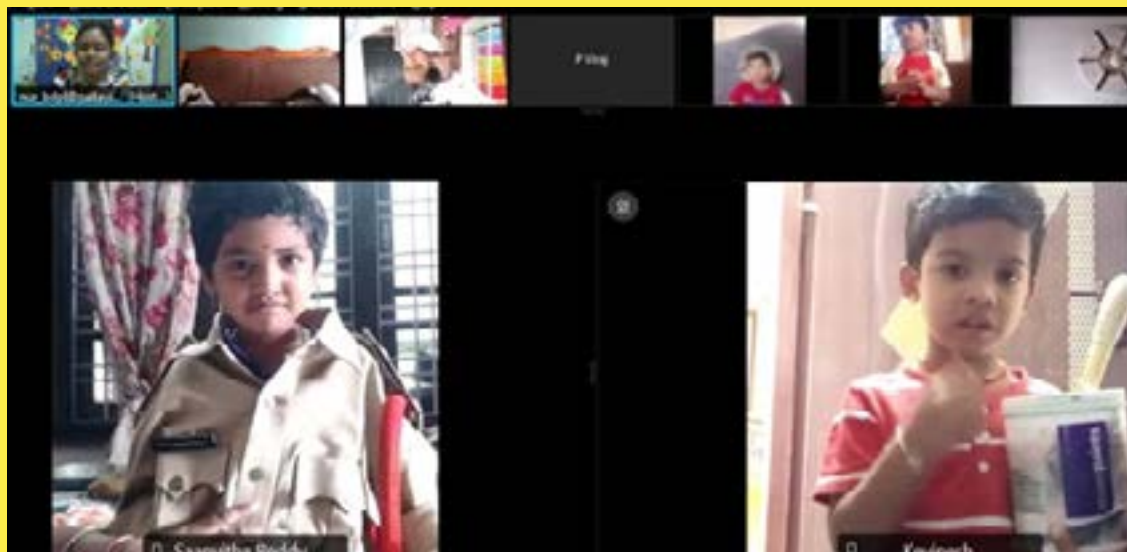

Keeping in mind what the world is going through at present, it is very important to develop the quality of empathy rather than sympathy. Sympathy might help a person to fulfill his needs for that moment, but empathy will help to empower.

An empowered person will be able to face any situation boldly and will stand for himself. Otherwise one will keep expecting the other person to take the responsibility. This way the ball keeps rolling from person to the other. It is very important to look at the blessings one has and give back to the society as much as possible. So $E=MC^2$ wherein 'E' is empowering and it is possible with a combination of motivation coupled with consistency and commitment. So be committed to imbibe the quality of empathy and spread the same to your near and dear.

Everyone is unique in his/ her own way. Every profession plays an important role in the society for the development of the community. It is imperative for the children to understand the importance of the dignity of labour. The children get immersed in participating the activity. Today they have learned the letter , L' and made themselves familiar with the words starting with the same.

Young children get affected by anything very quickly. So they need to know simple techniques and methods to address small problems. The children of pre-primary were given an insight into how to use different things in first aid box and how to keep their first aid box ready

Special assembly on '3Rs'

Students of Pallavi Model School, Boduppal, conducted a special assembly on 3Rs — Reduce, Reuse, Recycle. To make the world a better place to live in for the coming generations, students of class II introduced the concept of 3Rs.

Students presented their assembly laying stress on the importance of reducing the consumption of electricity, water, fossil fuels, etc., and also reusing things.

Recycling is a concept everyone is well aware of because of the scrap dealers. The scrap dealers help in recycling newspaper glass bottles and a variety of other things which are discarded by households all the time. Students explained that recycling is important because by recycling you give another life to the waste.

The students also explained to the audience how we can all reduce the consumption of electricity and why should we make more use of solar energy which is an unlimited resource.

They said that taking a bucket bath instead of a shower; using a carpool or walking wherever possible is a good idea to put into practice. Through this assembly, the importance of the segregation of bio-degradable and non-biodegradable waste was also explained.

Students were made aware of the colour codes of the bins used to segregate different types of waste.

Some students showed that the kitchen waste, banana peel, etc should be thrown in the green bin and coke can, plastic bags in the blue bin.

The assembly ended on a thoughtful note that the students should own up the responsibility to do their best to improve and save the environment.

NOVEMBER STORY : RAMAN THE DETECTIVE

Tenali Raman was once walking along a forest path when he was stopped by a merchant. "I'm looking for my camel which has strayed away. Did you see it passing by?" asked the merchant.

"Had the camel hurt its leg?" asked Raman.

"Oh yes! That means you have seen my camel!" said the merchant.

"Only its footprints. See, you can see footprints of an animal with three legs," said Raman, pointing out the footprints on the ground. "It was dragging the other leg because it was hurt in that leg."

"Was it blind in one eye?" Raman asked the merchant.

"Yes, yes," said the merchant eagerly.

"Was it loaded with wheat on one side and sugar on the other side?" asked Raman.

"Yes, you are right," said the merchant.

"So you have seen my camel!" exclaimed the merchant.

Raman looked upset. "Did I say I saw your camel?"

"You have given the exact description of my camel," said the merchant. "I saw no camel," said Raman.

"Do you see those plants lined up on both sides of this path? You can clearly see, some animal has eaten leaves of plants on the left, but the plants on the other side remain untouched. So the animal could see with only one eye.

"Look down. You can see ants lined up on this side which means, the animal was loaded with sugar bag on this side. The bag had a hole, which allowed the sugar to fall off."

“You can see grains of wheat fallen on the other side. The bag on this side also must have holes in it,” said Raman.

“I can see everything you showed me,” protested the merchant,”but I still don’t see my camel.”

“You follow this trail and soon you will catch up with your animal. After all it is hurt in one leg and you seem to be hale and hearty,” said Raman.

The merchant took his advice and followed the trail left by the camel.

Soon he caught up with the poor animal, limping along.

“Rani!” the merchant shouted in happiness, as he ran to his camel.
